Weather Forecast Wilkenson to speak about climate change in Pak Steve Wilkenson, candidate for state representative in District 47, will discuss his platform at the Johnson County Main Library, South Room. The event is free and open to the public. Wilkenson is a state representative for a third consecutive term, and a candidate for reelection. He grew up in a rural area of southeast Texas, and graduated from Midwestern State University. Before his election in 200, he served as mayor and county judge of Johnson County, and was also a citizen legislator for a time. Wilkenson's climate change platform calls for conserving the earth's resources, and creating an economic position for our "energy and agriculture-rich state." To that end, he has made several improvements to Johnson County's water and wastewater system, while at the same time, has increased our renewable energy resources. Wilkenson says a strong agricultural economy must come from maintaining a "healthy, biodiverse environment for our farms to flourish." This means that we must have safe water, manage with efficiency, and preserve the water supply for both our animal operations and people. While Wilkenson acknowledges that climate change is not caused by humans, he believes it is imperative that we become more "energy independent," and produc
